Nine Divine Nights

–Aarna Mapara (VII C)

The nine nights arrive, bringing a mood, a vibrant swell,
Colors, oh so many of them and lots of stories they tell.

The garba circles, a joyful art,
It shows one's lovely and lively heart.
The Dandiya sticks click, bringing a joyful beat,
Dancer moving swiftly with their quick feet.

We honor each form, a power untold,
As the pages of ancient history unfold.
A battle on for days, very long,
People pay tribute with a song.
Each diya that is lighted,
Is another sign of hope and auspiciousness ignited.

Of light over shadow, good over ill,
As the soul and the body with gratitude fill.

Friendship

–Daiwik Jindal (VII A)

Friendship is built on trust and care,
A promise kept that's always there.
It's sharing laughs, and moments rare,
A bond so warm, beyond compare.

In every moment, friends will stay,
They lift your doubts and brighten your day.
Through storms and tears, they won't walk away,
They hold your hand and light your way.

A friend brings joy when life feels gray,
They hear your fears and know what to say.
They stay beside you, come what may,
And make the pain just fade away.

A friend's true heart will never bend,
Their love will guide and always send.
Through thick and thin, they're your true
friend,
A bond like this will never end.

Navratri- A Festival of Devotion, Culture, and Victory

-Manya S. Dadawala (VIII B)

“નવરાત્રી લાવે શ્રદ્ધા અને શૌર્યની વાત,
મા દુર્ગા સાથે ઉજળી જાય દરેક રાત.”

Navratri is one of the most celebrated Hindu festivals in India. The word Navratri means "nine nights," and during these days, devotees worship the nine forms of Goddess Durga. The festival is a symbol of the victory of good over evil and the power of faith and devotion.

Navratri usually falls in the months of September or October. Each day of the festival is dedicated to one avatar of Goddess Durga, who represents strength, wisdom, and protection. People observe fasts, chant prayers, and decorate temples and homes. Cultural programs, music, and dance add to the festive spirit.

In different parts of India, Navratri has its own special charm. In Gujarat, people perform Garba and Dandiya Raas dances with colorful attire. In West Bengal, it is celebrated as Durga Puja with grand pandals, rituals, and artistic idols of the Goddess. In northern India, Ramlila is staged, showing the victory of Lord Rama over Ravana.

The last day of Navratri, known as Dussehra or Vijayadashami, marks the end of evil and the triumph of righteousness. It reminds us that truth and goodness always prevail.

Thus, Navratri is not just a religious festival but also a celebration of culture, tradition, and togetherness. It unites people in joy, devotion, and respect for the divine feminine power.

Peer Pressure

–Diya Gajjar (VII A)

Being honest, most of us must have felt pressured by our peers at some point of our life. But what exactly is peer pressure? Peer pressure is the influence from members of your own social group (peers) to behave, dress, or think in a certain way, often just to gain acceptance.

Peer pressure can be both positive and negative. Positive peer pressure encourages us to work hard, stay disciplined, adopt healthy habits, or participate in useful activities. For example, if your friends are preparing well for exams, you may also feel motivated to study harder.

However, negative peer pressure can lead to harmful choices. Sometimes, friends may force others to try things like smoking, lying, skipping school, or bullying others. In such situations, the desire to “fit in” may make a person act against their own values or better judgment.

It is important to understand that every individual has the right to make their own decisions. Learning to say “no” firmly, choosing friends wisely, and having confidence in yourself are the best ways to deal with peer pressure. Parents, teachers, and elders can also guide us whenever we feel confused or stuck.

In the end, peer pressure is something we all face, but how we respond to it shapes our character. If we choose wisely, peer pressure can make us better; if not, it can mislead us. The key is to stay true to yourself.
